The Protection of Minority Shareholders in Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia

By

Susanne Olberg

Duncker & Humblot · Berlin
SUSANNE OLBERG

The Protection of Minority Shareholders in Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia
Schriften zum Wirtschaftsrecht

Band 263
The Protection of Minority Shareholders in Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia

By

Susanne Olberg

Duncker & Humblot · Berlin
The Faculty of Law of the Humboldt-University of Berlin accepted this work as thesis in the year 2013.

Bibliographic information of the German national library

The German national library registers this publication in the German national bibliography; specified bibliographic data are retrievable on the Internet about http://dnb.d-nb.de.

All rights reserved
© 2014 Duncker & Humblot GmbH, Berlin
Typesetting: L101 Mediengestaltung, Berlin
Printing: buchbücher.de gmbh, Birkach
Printed in Germany

ISSN 0582-026X
ISBN 978-3-428-14349-8 (Print)
ISBN 978-3-428-54349-6 (E-Book)
ISBN 978-3-428-84349-7 (Print & E-Book)

Printed on no aging resistant (non-acid) paper according to ISO 9706 ©

Internet: http://www.duncker-humblot.de
Table of Contents

A. Theoretical and Methodological Framework .................................................. 11
   I. Introduction ........................................................................................................ 11
   II. Definition of Terms ......................................................................................... 13
   III. Methodological Approach .............................................................................. 15
      1. Functional Comparative Law ................................................................. 15
      2. New Institutional Economics ................................................................. 16
   IV. The Conflict Between Majority and Minority Shareholders .................... 19
      1. The Principal-Agent Approach .............................................................. 19
      2. Incomplete Contracts, Information Asymmetry and Opportunism ........... 21
      3. Private Benefits of Control ................................................................. 22
   V. The Legal Protection of Minority Shareholders ............................................. 23
      1. Convergence Towards the Anglo-American Model of Corporate Law? ................................................................................... 23
      2. The Legal Devices Protecting Minority Shareholders ......................... 24
   VI. The Factual Protection of Minority Shareholders ...................................... 28
      1. Incentives for the Expropriation of Minority Shareholders .................. 28
      2. Constraints on the Expropriation of Minority Shareholders ............... 30
         a) Shareholder Activism ............................................................................ 30
         b) Independent Directors .......................................................................... 33
         c) Gatekeepers ........................................................................................... 37
         d) External Product Market Competition .............................................. 39
         e) Control by the Capital Market ............................................................. 40
         f) Private and Public Enforcement ........................................................... 41
         g) Labor ....................................................................................................... 42
         h) Moral and Reputational Concerns ....................................................... 43
            i) Internal Corporate Governance Practices .................................... 43
      3. Conclusions .................................................................................................... 44
   VII. Empirical Research ....................................................................................... 44

B. The Legal Protection of Minority Shareholders in Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia ........................................................................................................ 48
   I. Sources of Law .................................................................................................. 48
   II. A Comparative Legal Analysis ....................................................................... 49
      1. Minority Shareholder Appointment Rights .......................................... 49
      2. Minority Shareholder Decision and Action Rights ............................... 52
      3. Independent Directors .............................................................................. 57
      4. Equal Treatment .......................................................................................... 59
5. Constraints and Affiliation Rights ........................................ 60
6. Takeovers ............................................................................. 63
7. Delisting ............................................................................... 65
III. Conclusions .......................................................................... 65

C. The Factual Protection of Minority Shareholders in Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia ........................................... 69
I. Vietnam ..................................................................................... 69
1. Features of the Vietnamese Corporate Landscape .................. 69
   a) Restructuring State-Owned Enterprises ............................. 71
   b) General Corporations ......................................................... 73
   c) Economic Groups ............................................................... 76
   d) Equitization of SOEs .......................................................... 78
   e) The State Capital Investment Corporation .......................... 84
   f) Ownership Structure and Means of Control ...................... 87
      aa) Ownership Structure in Equitized Companies ............... 87
      bb) Ownership and Control in Private Shareholding Companies 93
      cc) Means of Control ........................................................... 95
2. Capital Market and Investors’ Base ....................................... 96
3. Internal Corporate Governance Practices ............................. 102
4. Shareholder Activism ............................................................... 107
5. Foreign Investment ................................................................. 110
6. Gatekeepers ........................................................................... 112
7. Public and Private Enforcement ............................................ 114
8. Implications for the Legal Protection of Minority Shareholders .. 121
   a) Minority Shareholder Appointment and Decision Rights ...... 121
   b) Independent Directors and Equal Treatment ....................... 124
   c) Constraints and Affiliation Rights ....................................... 125
9. Summary .................................................................................. 125

II. Thailand ................................................................................... 127
1. The State-Party-Business Nexus ............................................ 127
2. Features of the Thai Corporate Sector .................................... 135
   a) Thai Corporations and Ethnicity ......................................... 135
   b) Ownership Structure ......................................................... 138
   c) Control of Companies ....................................................... 147
   d) State-Owned Enterprises .................................................... 151
3. The Capital Market and Investors’ Base ................................ 154
4. Internal Corporate Governance Practices ............................. 161
5. Shareholder Activism ............................................................... 168
6. Foreign Investors ................................................................. 173
7. Gatekeepers ......................................................................... 177
8. Public and Private Enforcement ............................................ 180
9. Implications for the Legal Protection of Minority Shareholders .. 187
Table of Contents

1. The Case of Thailand 250
2. The Case of Malaysia 252
3. The Case of Vietnam 255
4. General Conclusions: Monitoring as a Public Good 257

Appendices 261
Bibliography 265
Subject Index 288
List of Tables and Figures

| Table 1: | Ownership Structure of Vietnamese Equitized Companies in 2001 | 88 |
| Table 2: | Ownership Structure of Vietnamese Equitized Companies in 2004 | 88 |
| Table 3: | Ownership Structure of Vietnamese Equitized Companies in 2008 | 89 |
| Table 4: | Number of Vietnamese Joint Stock Companies 2000–2008 | 94 |
| Table 5: | Capital of Vietnamese Joint Stock Companies in 2007 | 94 |
| Table 6: | Number of Employees of Vietnamese Joint Stock Companies 2007 | 95 |
| Table 7: | Distribution of 220 Thai Business Groups by Ethnicity and Generation, 1997 | 137 |
| Table 8: | Cash-flow and Voting Rights in Thai Corporations in 2000 | 141 |
| Table 9: | Pyramidal Structures of Thai Corporations 1995–2000 | 142 |
| Table 10: | Cross-holdings of Thai Corporations 1995–2000 | 143 |
| Table 11: | Ownership Structure of Thai Corporations in 1996 and 2000 | 144 |
| Table 12: | Ownership Structure of Thai Corporations 1996, 2000 and 2006 | 145 |
| Table 13: | Cross-Shareholdings/Pyramidal Ownerships of Thai Corporations 2003–2008 | 145 |
| Table 14: | Controlling Shareholders of Thai Corporations as Directors | 147 |
| Table 15: | Attributes of Directors on the Boards of 323 Thai Listed Companies, 2000 | 148 |
| Table 16: | Shareholders as Top Managers of Thai Firms 1995–2000 | 149 |
| Table 17: | Board Memberships in Thai Firms 1995–2000 | 149 |
| Table 18: | Role of CEOs and Board of Directors in Thai Corporations | 150 |
| Table 19: | Market Value of Thai Listed SOEs | 153 |
| Table 20: | Stock Market Variables from 1975–2004 | 155 |
| Table 21: | Market Capitalization of Thai Listed Companies in Relation to GDP 2002–2006 | 156 |
| Table 22: | Trading Characteristics by Type of Investor 2010 | 159 |
| Table 23: | Free Float of Thai Listed Corporations | 160 |
| Table 24: | Perception of Thai Institutional Actors’ Role in Corporate Governance | 162 |
Table 25: Results of AGM Assessment Project on Thai Listed Corporations  . 165
Table 26: Tasks for Better Corporate Governance in Thailand ................. 167
Table 27: Number of Thai Asset Management Companies and Funds
1992–2009 ................................................................. 171
Table 28: Net Asset Value of Thai Funds 2007–2009 ........................... 171
Table 29: Transparency of Shareholding Structure of Thai Corporations
2003–2008 .................................................................. 191
Table 30: Problems Regarding Related-Party-Transactions of Thai Corporations 2003–2008 .................................. 192
Table 31: Percentage of Thai Companies with “Conspicuous” Related-Party-Transactions ........................................... 193
Table 32: Malaysian Equity Held by Ethnicity ................................. 209
Table 33: Shareholdings of Five Largest Shareholders in 731 KLSE
Corporations in 1998...................................................... 215
Table 34: Ownership Concentration for 731 Listed Corporations in 1998... 215
Table 35: Control in 238 Malaysian Companies in 1996 ............ 216
Table 36: Concentration of Control and Company Size in Malaysian
Corporations .................................................................. 217
Table 37: Separation of Ownership and Control in Malaysian Corporations... 218
Table 38: Control of Malaysian Equity ......................................... 219
Table 39: Percentage Changes in Categories of Malaysian Account Holders . 222
Table 40: Paid-Up Capital by Types of Investors (RM) ..................... 222
Table 41: Substantial Shareholdings of Malaysian Key Domestic Institutional
Investors ........................................................................ 224
Table 42: Independent Directors of 960 Malaysian Listed Companies as at December 2007 .................................................................. 245

Figure 1: Market value of Thai SOEs 2002–2007 ............................... 152
Figure 2: Market Capitalization of SET ........................................ 156
Figure 3: Holdings in Thai Equity by Local and Foreign Investors .... 157
Figure 4: Total (buy+sell) Trading Value (Billions of Baht) Classified
by Type of Investors ...................................................... 158
A. Theoretical and Methodological Framework

I. Introduction

The protection of minority shareholders has become a favorite subject of scholarly debate. The main reason is economic in nature: in an environment of weak protection, minority shareholders will hesitate to contribute to the funding of corporations, resulting in increases in the average cost of capital for corporations. This in turn will lessen the competitiveness of these corporations in comparison to corporations in jurisdictions with higher protection of minority shareholders. Furthermore, capital will flow from jurisdictions with weak protection to jurisdictions with stronger protection of minority shareholders.

The debate on the protection of minority shareholders gained momentum after the Asian crisis in 1997 when international organizations like the World Bank called for better corporate governance in general and better protection of minority shareholders in particular.¹ Johnson et al. found evidence that, rather than macroeconomic factors, “corporate governance in general, and the de facto protection of minority shareholder rights in particular, matters a great deal for the extent of exchange rate depreciation and stock market decline in 1997–98”². The new awareness of the need for protection of minority shareholders was also reflected in a survey in December 1999 among portfolio investors in the major financial centers of Asia (excluding Japan), the U.S. and Europe, who ranked respect for minority shareholder rights as the second most important factor in assessing Southeast Asian equities.³ Asian countries responded to these increasing demands for better protection of minority shareholders by wide-ranging legal reforms that included the issuance of mandatory laws and regulations but also the drafting of voluntary codes of corporate governance.

¹ See for example World Bank, East Asia: Recovery and Beyond (2000) 107–111.
However, the question is whether and to what extent in practice these legal reforms result in enhanced minority shareholders’ protection. The impact that ‘law on the books’ has in reality depends on a wide range of factors. Human behavior is not only shaped by formal rules, but also by informal rules. Furthermore, the extent to which formal and informal rules are implemented depends largely on their enforcement characteristics. These factors might be summed up by the term ‘institutions’.\(^4\) In order to shed some light on the protection of minority shareholders in Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia, the thesis will evaluate the formal and informal rules in regard to minority shareholders’ protection and their enforcement characteristics in the three countries. To this end, the thesis will be divided into two parts. The first part will compare the law on the books, in other words, the formal rules that regulate the protection of minority shareholders, in the three jurisdictions. The second part will evaluate which informal rules and enforcement characteristics determine the protection of minority shareholders in each country and, finally, assess these factors and their impact.

This comparison is based on the reasons that follow. The thesis assumes that in line with a worldwide trend of convergence in corporate law along Anglo-American concepts of corporate law, there is also a convergence of the formal rules regarding the protection of minority shareholders in these three countries. Given such a convergence of legal concepts, informal rules and enforcement characteristics largely determine the differences between the jurisdictions. A comparison of the different countries therefore highlights which informal rules and enforcement characteristics cause similar formal rules to have different impacts. It thereby exposes the importance of informal rules and enforcement characteristics.

The choice of Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia is based on two facts. First, the countries have started to rethink their formal rules roughly at the same point in time. Second, they have a totally different background inter alia in terms of different levels of economic development and completely different political systems. To start with, they have different political backgrounds ranging from a socialist to a democratic political system, and display different stages of capital market development and investors’ bases. The comparison between the three countries is therefore especially qualified to highlight the importance of the local context of legal rules aiming to protect minority shareholders. The most interesting point, however, and the main reason for the choice of these three jurisdictions is the fact that their jurisdictions have different legal origins: Malaysia belongs to the common law tradition, but also provides for sharia law. Thailand’s legal system is based on civil law, but influenced by the common law system, while Vietnam’s legal system is influenced by its socialist background and French civil law. A convergence along Anglo-American concepts of corporate law therefore highlights the difficulties in convergence and path dependencies. The objective of the thesis can therefore be summarized as illustrating the importance of context for the functioning of law, based on the example of a comparison of legal and factual protection of minority shareholders in Vietnam, Thailand and Malaysia.

\(^4\) North, Douglass C., The American Economic Review 84 (1994) 359 (360). See also Kirchner, Christian, Comparative Law and Institutional Economics – Legal Transplants in Corporate Governance, in: Nobel, Peter/Gets, Marina (ed.), (2006) 201 (205) where institutions are defined as general rules together with the enforcement system.

II. Definition of Terms

The thesis focuses solely on companies limited by shares. Other forms of associations including limited partnerships by shares are not considered. Private companies (or ‘privately held’ or ‘closed’ or ‘closely held’ companies) are also excluded from analysis. To the extent possible, the thesis will point out differences between unlisted and listed joint stock companies. Shareholders are the members of the company holding “a participation interest in its capital (equity holder), composed of relatively small units called shares”5.

A starting point for the definition of minority shareholders is the differentiation from the majority shareholder. Perakis argues that “minority is a relational legal concept, whose definition needs the notion of majority”6. The definition of majority shareholder harbors its own problems. Majority is often defined by reference to the voting power or the capital prevalence. In regard to voting power at the shareholders’ meeting, majority is usually defined as the power to enact a resolution. The threshold to pass a resolution, however, depends on the kind of resolution and jurisdictions may even provide different thresholds to pass an ordinary resolution. In most jurisdictions, resolutions regarding important decisions require two-thirds or three-fourths of votes whereas ordinary decisions require 50 percent of the votes although exceptions exist, such as the Vietnamese threshold of 65 percent to pass ordinary resolutions. However, the real percentage of voting power or capital prevalence that is necessary to pass a corporate resolution may differ significantly from the percentage stipulated in law. The Malaysian
